Portraits that inspire, entertain and delight, and to reveal the deep fusion discipline and dissipation through which the artistic temperament is allowed to evolve, recharge, emerge. From Beethoven and Kafka to George Sand, Picasso, Woody Allen and Agatha Christie; From Leo Tolstoy and Henry James to Charles Dickens and John Updike, there are writers, composers, painters, choreographers, playwrights, philosophers, cartoonists, comedians, comedians, poets, sculptors and scholars about how they make up (and avoid) their creations. Charles Dickens Dickens' eldest son recalled that no city clerk was more methodous or orderly than he was; there was no humdrum, monotonous, traditional task ever discharged with more precision, or more business-like regularity than what he gave to the work of his imagination and imagination. Dickens rose at 7:00, had breakfast at 8:00, and was in his study by 9:00. He stayed there until 2:00, took a short lunch break with his family, which he swayed to, was often in a trance, ate mechanically and barely spoke a word before rushing back to his desk. On a typical day, he was able to fill in about 2,000 words, but sometimes he could handle twice that amount while flying the imagination. Maya Angelou, I have a hotel room where I do my job... a tiny, average room with only one bed, and sometimes, if I can find it, a face pool. I keep a dictionary, a Bible, a deck of cards, and a bottle of sherry in the room...—How artists work, how they ritualize their days with the comforting (mundane) details of their lives: their daily routines, fears, dreams, naps, eating habits, and other prescribed, finely calibrated fine maneuvers... From Beethoven and Kafka to George Sand, Picasso, Woody Allen and Agatha Christie; From Leo Tolstoy and Henry James to Charles Dickens and John Updike, there are writers, composers, painters, choreographers, playwrights, philosophers, cartoonists, comedians, comedians, poets, sculptors and scholars about how they make up (and avoid) their creations. — Academia.edu cookies to personalize content, personalize ads, and improve your experience. Free Daily Rituals: How Artists Work Book by Mason Currey.Daily Rituals: How to Workby Mason CurreySynopsis: Franz Kafka, frustrated with his place of residence and daily work, wrote a letter to Felice Bauer Bauer The time is short, my strength is limited, the office is a horror, the apartment is noisy, and if a pleasant, simple life is not possible, you should try to wriggle through subtle maneuvers. Kafka is one of 161 inspired and inspiring minds, including novelists, poets, playwrights, painters, philosophers, scientists and mathematicians, who describe how he gently maneuvers the many (self-inflicted) obstacles and (self-imposed) daily rituals to do their job, whether they get up early or stay late; whether it's self-medication or bathing with doughnuts, drinking large amounts of coffee or long daily walks. Thomas Wolfe wrote standing in the kitchen, on top of the refrigerator as the table, daydreamingly cherished the men's configurations... Jean-Paul Sartre chewed corydrane tablets (a mixture of amphetamines and aspirin) and swallowed ten times as many doses a day... Descartes loved to nip in bed, his mind wandering through forests, gardens and enchanted palaces, where he experienced every joy imaginable. Here they are: Anthony Trollope, who did most of his work while ironing... Leo Tolstoy... Charles Dickens... Pablo Picasso... George Gershwin, who, said his brother Ira, worked twelve hours a day from late morning to midnight, forming the piano in pajamas, bathrobes, and slippers. . . . Here are also the daily rituals of Charles Darwin, Andy Warhol, John Updike, Twyla Tharp, Benjamin Franklin, William Faulkner, Jane Austen, Anne Rice, and Igor Stravinsky (he was never able to compose if he wasn't sure no one could hear him, and when blocked, he stood on his head to clear his brain).
